

The week the zoo
came to ours!

On Monday

The zoo brought us a lion.

As he roared and growled, we managed to calm him with some tasty meat. Unfortunately, the lion was starving and gnawed its way through very quickly. As we didn't have any more meat he started to eat our house! So we sent him back to the zoo.

On Tuesday

The zoo gave us a panda.

She was very cuddly and fortunately brought its own bamboo. That was where the problem lay. It was too loud! Its crunch, crunch noise was terribly annoying as I tried to do my homework. So we sent her back to the zoo.

On Wednesday

The zoo gave us a cat. He had brought its own food like the panda. He was so cute and fluffy. It was a joy to have him in your arms. The only problem was he was quite a big pooper in the house. So we sent him back to the zoo.

On Thursday

The zoo gave us a dog.

She was amazing. Her fur was as soft as a furry blanket. I loved her! The only problem was she was too playful. As I tried to read my book she kept jumping up and down barking at me. So we sent her back to the zoo.

On Friday

The zoo gave us an eagle.

He was great fun as long as you were in the garden and wore protective gloves. The only problem was if he flew up high and landed in a tree, then he refused to come down so you were in trouble! Finally, we got him down and sent him back to the zoo.

On Saturday

It was choosing day.

Which animal to pick we did not know. Should we pick the lion with its hungry eating ,the panda with its crunchy eating, the cat with its pooing in the house, the dog with its playful ways or the eagle with its high flying tactics?

In the end, we decided on a cat and a dog so they can be companions.

How can we stop their problems?

On Sunday

It was pick up day!

As we got into the car, we decided what to call them. We called the cat Menika and the dog Daisy. When we got to the zoo, we skirted as many of the animals we tried out as possible.

At home we had the best of times playing as a five.
